

PET TOYS & ACCESSORIES TESTING

HELPING TO INTEGRATE QUALITY AND SAFETY INTO YOUR PET PRODUCTS

Owners usually only find out about the risks of pet toys when they are rushing their beloved pets to the veterinarian's clinic. That "indestructible" chew toy can fall apart, be swallowed and cause a lot of stress and damage to a dog's intestines.

Pet safety is a cause close to the heart. Many owners are banding together to lobby for regulation and accountability. At the same time, they are working to increase consumer awareness, and to direct them to quality products by running studies and offering their own certifications for pet accessories.

Hazards commonly found in pet toys may harm pets and children at home, and unlike children, pets may not be able to voice out such discomfort. Recalls and safety alerts from pet products show that awareness of the safety of pet products is increasing. Industry players should mitigate risks with documented safety testing and compliance.
